The Force

- Lyn McLean -

We are all surrounded by artificial electromagnetic energies in our homes, at our workplaces and even in our hospitals and schools.

Globally there are millions of kilometres of power lines, millions of phone towers, satellites, TV and radio transmitters - all emitting electromagnetic radiation, all bathing the planet in a sea of artificial energy.

With over five billion mobile phones in use, the penetration of this technology - literally and figuratively - is an issue that concerns us all.

What are the effects of this energy?

How can you protect your home and your family?

What are the implications of this technology for us at a personal and societal level?

Author, educator and director of EMR Australia, Lyn will share her experiences, her insights and techniques for living more safely in a world of electromagnetic pollution.

Lyn's website is www.emraustralia.com.au

From the President

When I was young we were all urged to make New Year resolutions but I don't know if the youth of today still do it or not. Certainly, at that time we had never heard of William James although there was a boy called Philip James in the class above. Anyway, W.J. said rather dramatically:

“To change one's life:

Start immediately

Do it flamboyantly

No exceptions

William James

Already we are heading towards the end of January at break neck-speed as everything appears to be moving faster. Is it too late to make a New Year resolution? Or to change the ones we made as the fireworks lit up the midnight summer sky?

Not really. “Life is a series of natural and spontaneous changes. Don't resist them - that only creates sorrow. Let reality be reality. Let things flow naturally forward in whatever way they like.” Lao-Tse

So it doesn't matter whether you consciously affirm what you want to happen or just decide that this year you'll do a bit more for others than you did last year, without being too specific. Opportunities for random acts of kindness will present themselves continually, no worries.

See you at the meeting.

best wishes

Communication With Other Species

Review of a talk by Noel Jordon on October 17, 2010 by Catherine Casey

*(This article was sent to the Editor in November last year, but misplaced.
It is presented here as it shows the benefits of attending our monthly talks.
Ed)*

Behind the physical, there lies another universe. This illuminating revelation was channelled to Noel Jordon, and his late wife, Pat, during one of their many spiritual communications with energy beings and species from the physical and non-physical dimensions over a period of several years, and was among many revelations which Noel would share with us during his enlightening presentation, 'Communication With Other Species' in October.

Attending my first Dowzers Society meeting on that day, I was spell-bound as Noel invited us into his extraordinary world, an intriguing domain where he has shared the deepest level of communication with all manner of creatures, including ants, wasps, mosquitoes, Siberian tigers, peacocks, mice - and yes, even rats - the obliging rodents happily vacating a neighbour's barn, when asked politely! Noel noted that whenever he has shared these revealing insights with people in the past, they would invariably look around for the nearest exit! However on this day, Noel's audience was captivated by his experiences, all of which had been recorded and documented with impeccable detail by Pat.

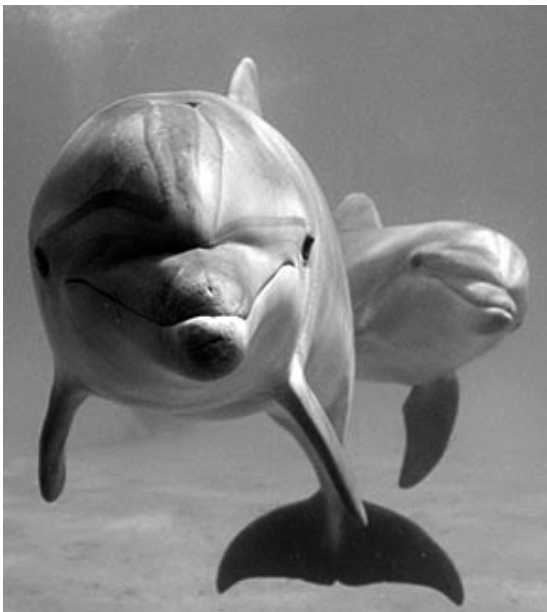

Noel enlivened us with many amusing stories, but his most profound revelations were his communications with a much-loved Silver Birch Tree, and a dolphin named Dinovar - encounters which he spoke of with the utmost reverence, and which have clearly left an indelible impression on his own spirit. He describes his first communication with the Silver Birch as "a feeling of communion impossible to verbalise."

Feeling deeply moved by their sacred union, Noel responded: "May my life be as beautiful and nourishing to others, as your own. I revere thee". He then asked the tree, "What are you thinking about now?" "I feel as if I am dreaming", was the reply. "We do have dreams, and this is like a dream meeting. Why don't you write a poem about our meeting?" Noel kindly shared with us the inspiring poem he had written to honour the Silver Birch Tree - a loving tribute to the mighty spirit who had opened its heart to enfold him.

During his communications, Noel was told that the trees were aware of everything that was occurring on our planet, including the wars, destruction and violence that our species were inflicting on one another. It also became evident to Noel that his sincere appreciation of the tree's own existence and beauty, had connected them both in that moment of union, unveiling the ineffable realisation that they were sharing the same divine life-force. There was no separation between man and nature.

Noel also spoke of his insightful encounters with Dinovar and his dolphin family, his consciousness blending with the dolphins as he accompanied them to the depths of the ocean on many occasions, Dinovar revealing that, not only do their species communicate telepathically, have their own families and mate for life, they are also aware of all the celestial bodies of the solar system, including galaxies, quasars, pulsars, the curvature of space, gravitational fields, and the slowing and quickening of time.

Dinovar also revealed that his species have their own well-developed body of science, literature and music, which has been handed-down genetically and telepathically over countless generations, and that they have the ability to project their consciousness into the centre of the sun, and be present at the birth of stars.

As a child I had always believed in magic, and Noel's revelations transported me back to the enchanting stories of Enid Blyton and Beatrix Potter, where communication with animals, trees and nature spirits was, indeed, second-nature. And here I was today, being reminded that they had been right all along. I felt grateful to those childhood visionaries for instilling within me a sense of wonder and curiosity which has prevailed throughout my life, and grown into a passion for unravelling the mysteries of the universe.

Noel believes we all have the ability to communicate with other species, and that we are doing it all the time, whether we realise it or not. He feels that we should encourage children to develop their innate ability to communicate with the world around them, planting the seeds of wonder within them, and the realisation that they are a spark of divine creation, no less than the trees and the stars. One day they may not need instruction from Hogwarts School of Wizardry to ignite their senses, just a belief in real magic, and the power of their own spirits to create miracles.

Thank you, Noel, for reminding us that there is, undoubtedly, another universe beyond the physical, and that we are one with all that exists. How could we not be inspired to run out and hug the nearest tree, echoing your fervent prayer: "I revere thee."

Christmas Giving

As you may recall, everyone contributed food to the Society's Christmas party. After the party there was quite a lot of food left. Florence Johnson, one of our members, took the leftovers to the retirement village accross the street with her daughter. The ladies in the retirement village were very surprised and gratefull for the gift.

The Positive Nature of Negative Energy

Reprinted from The American Society of Dowsers Quarterly, Summer 2008

Dowsing to understand the nature of so called ‘negative energies’ on a piece of property can lead to some surprising insights.

When a client calls me in because they are having problems with the energy on their land, we discuss what they perceive to be the situation. Then I walk around myself and listen to what the land has to say. There is often some energy imbalance that has been perpetrated by the unwitting interference of some human process; nature itself has a wonderful way of balancing its own domain.

In our Western society, one situation I often see comes from an insistence that everything on the property has to be ‘good’ and anything negative must be ‘destroyed’. The property owner’s pursuit of this, such as leveling sinkholes or fertilizing areas where grass won’t grow, is actually causing imbalance. They have pitted themselves in an unconscious battle with the nature forces of that piece of property. These forces are struggling to retain the health of the area in spite of human interference.

Once I show the homeowner how they are misperceiving the situation and show them how to connect with the energies of their property, they are very willing and ready to work in harmony with the nature spirits and always report back about remarkable beneficial changes.

Common Misconceptions

Believing they need to convert a negative frequency into a positive one is a common error among many good people. For example, a spiritual retreat center had built a ceremonial fire pit at the back of their lot. Nearby was a large patch of wild raspberry that really annoyed them. They didn’t like the energy and were thinking of ripping the bushes out. They wanted everything to be ‘spiritual’ in that space.

Briar Bushes And Thorny Plants

Briar bushes and other such thorny plants gravitate to and do well in areas of negative energy. They can be extremely useful devices for keeping the energy of a property clear and balanced. In this case, the energetic conflict between the owners and the bushes was clogging up the effectiveness of this area.

I am, most of the time, a full body deviceless dowser or, in other terms an interdimensional communicator. I use internal dowsing techniques to locate the frequency I am seeking. Once there, I use internal dowsing techniques to locate the band on which the life forms wish to communicate. Then we enter into a discussion of the situation and confer on what can be done. In this situation, the briar bushes were complaining about the landowners. The bushes were being energy blocked and thus could not perform their duty eating the negative energies of the area.

This was especially significant because so many seekers were coming to the area, seeking to release their own issues to make spiritual progress. There were some still undigested negative issues floating about the area from a recent ceremony at the full moon a few nights before!

I explained the complaint to the owners. Once they understood the situation, they were more than willing to adjust their perceptions, and to value this area. This area would be a strong asset to their spiritual purpose if it had a good supply of negative energy to nourish it. There was plenty of this food being released at every one of their energy infusing ceremonies!!

So the three of us worked together with the bushes to create an energy structure that would funnel the negative energy released during ceremony or meditative contemplation, into the bushes. Both the bushes and the area itself thrived and the air became sparkling clear, just as the owners wished.

Briar bushes are excellent areas for 'catching' negative frequencies and clearing them from the environment.

An Exit Route

Once a group of energy workers, two friends and myself, were on a woodland walk. We passed an area where the ghost of a murdered Mafioso hung out, waiting for the return of his 'friend' who had performed his contract murder. So he had a lot of bitterness, which we explained to him was senseless as he had died over fifty years before, and the 'friend' was by now also dead. During this period, he also had been changing, for he had been looking after a little girl ghost in that vicinity. Through this heart offered care, he had earned enough 'good karma points', to be able to go to the light. But he told us he would not go unless he could take the child as well, perhaps this was his last test, and she was off playing somewhere else. My friends shrugged and continued their walk, but I had lingered behind and the Mafioso approached me, the little girl now with him, and ready to transition. He indicated the appropriate place would be a briar patch. We saw that the energies there were compatible with his negative energy and the transition was easily made.

Sinkholes

Other 'under-utilized' negative land forms are the round sinkhole depressions present on many properties in the Great Lakes prairie area where I now live. The water table is very close to the surface here and the pull from earth shifts and underground streams often cause depressions in the surface land. These sinkholes are similar to the briar bushes in their ability to eat negative energy. I learned about their usefulness from the nature spirits at a local preserve.

It had been a hard few days and walking through the preserve's woods, I went up to a pine tree, placed my hands on it, and asked if it would please run some rejuvenating energy through my own energy field. A nature spirit gently communicated with me, from behind. Right now, I was too clogged with stress for the tree to be able to help, the spirit explained. But if I would turn around, they could help me in another way. I turned and was guided to a small sinkhole. This area, they explained, was a negative vortex. It had a counter rotating field, and also a minor rotating field, that between the two loosened, then captured negative energy and pulled it down into the hole. The hole was collecting its own type of necessary food. If I would throw my stress into it, the sinkhole area would be fed and kept active, and I would be cleared. Then the pine trees would have space to run their good frequencies through me. I listened, followed their instructions, and was wonderfully rejuvenated.

Sinkhole vortex

On future trips to this space, I learned more. There were a number of sinkholes in that area, all near pine trees and operating at different frequencies. In this specific area there were three in a row, each with a pine tree nearby, in three different sizes and with an ascending scale of energy removal from large rough and low, to high and smooth like 000 sandpaper or a higher octave of music.

Moreover, in a line extending either side of the series of three sinkholes, all trees were perfectly straight and strong, while many others in that area were curved in some manner. So the ley line energy the sinkholes were clearing affected the energies along its gridline as well.

Now on occasion I take a workshop to this preserve and teach others how to work with the sinkholes. Many people have sinkhole areas on their property and very often it would be more beneficial to work with this vortex than to attempt to remove it. A sinkhole area surrounded by thorny plants or a rose bush becomes doubly effective as a natural negative energy drain for that property.

Portals

Negative energy vortexes are portals. However, a really well established portal, used for traveling between worlds, has a different energy. It is of necessity a more stable, balanced energy active form, for it needs to serve as a doorway. The best portals consist of positive and negative energies in balance, the structure permanent. Some portals are cyclical and can be passed through only at particular periods of time. Some rotate between pulling in and sending out. On occasion, in new housing developments, owners feel shadowy presences in their home. When I investigate, I sometimes find the presences are nature beings who were on this side of their portal when it was bulldozed down and destroyed.

Inner earth heart shaped portal

They have become forlorn refugees seeking a way home. We discuss the situation, which can usually be corrected by the assistance of human intervention (we are truly the stewards of earth, capable of working in all the frequencies including the gross physical, which other life forms cannot do). Assistance might include locating and holding stable a secondary portal nearby, sometimes guarded by other subtle life forms who need to be circumvented, or finding another potential doorway somewhere else on their grid that we can open for them to travel home.

Vortexes

Negative energy vortexes are different from sluggish, overactive and chaotic energies. The function of the negative vortex is to pull energy in, while the positive vortex spins energy out. Sluggish, overactive and chaotic energies can occur internal to either the positive or negative polarity of a situation. Positive and negative vortexes can be located near each other. They can also occur in the same space, .....

Dowsing Seminar for February 27th, 2011 - Beginners & Refresher -

With Col & Julie Zwan

This seminar is a great opportunity for any new member to get into dowsing with an experienced dowser. The benefits of dowsing are limitless. Dowsing can be used in most aspects of your daily life, you just need to learn how.

Col's methods will also appeal to the experienced dowsers who will be able to sharpen their dowsing skills and broaden their perspective. Col will be assisted by his wife Julie. They both have been dowsing for many years.

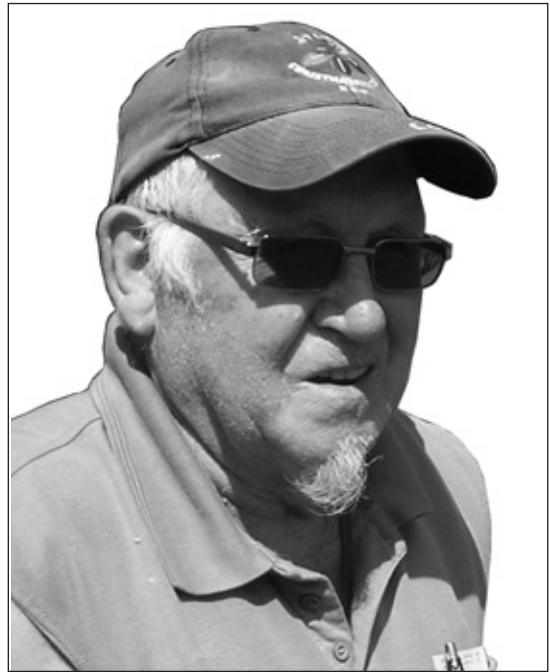

Col started when he was 15. In 1944 in occupied Holland, his uncle Ben showed him how to find earth lines in the house, as his grandmother was suffering from a bad back. They moved the grandmother's bed away from the line. A couple of days later a bomb fell where the bed had been. The grandmother survived and her back pain vanished. Col was suitably impressed, but he only saw it as a party trick at the time.

He started dowsing in earnest when he came to Australia. His first success was when he was in the Australian Fire Brigade; he had lost his hearing aid, and had to brush off his rods to find the expensive item. Later on, a telecom technician complained to him that with his $1000 equipment he could not find the broken telephone line in the garden. Col got his $1 rods out and found the line right away. One thing led to another and pretty soon, while in Patonga (NSW Central Coast) Col started to find water for neighbours.

Over time, he developed in his mind a picture of how everything in the universe interconnects and how this really forms the basic corner stone of dowsing. Col will cover a little on the history of dowsing, and spend time to explain and demonstrate how to achieve the dowsing response at a practical level.

This will be a hands-on seminar with plenty of practical work. Bring your pendulum if you have one, but there will be plenty of dowsing tools available for purchase, including some specially designed by Col. Also bring pen & paper and lunch. You can also find cafes close by on Gladesville Road.

The Seminar cost is $120 for members and $140 for non-members. Non-members will have the opportunity to join the Society on the day at a discounted price.

Continued from page 11..... sharing or rotating dominance in a cyclical manner such as at different times of day or of year. Connected to any vortex, in some manner, is its polar opposite.

This is because a vortex, like all else in our universe, is at its core a merkabah, or star tetrahedron. A star tetrahedron consists of two polarities that spin counter to each other and keep each other clear and in motion. In any particular merkabah, one polarity may, for a time, dominate the other; the other may be invisible to the naked eye, but it is always present.

An example of this is a tornado. In this case the counter-rotating negative polarity is so dominant it is destructive. If we could cap the tornado, it could be contained. On a piece of land, the same principles exist. An out of control vortex can be capped either by energizing its opposite within itself, or by locating the nearby area it is supposed to partner with, and clearing and strengthening that one.

Sometimes sluggish energy is the problem. A vortex is not functioning well, thus not doing its job. This can be due to many reasons, including the efforts of the property owners to change that section in some manner or the blocking of its partner vortex in some manner (as by the placement of a house on its location). Chaotic energy can occur when a vortex is receiving mixed messages. It can occur when an area is in change itself and the new course forward is not yet set. It can also occur during a natural shift in a cyclical rhythm, when the energies in an area change, such as with the seasons or day/night or sun/moon tides.

Positive chaotic periods are especially powerful in their potentials. The walls between worlds are thinnest now and inter-dimensional travel is easy. We experience this on a daily basis, at dawn and dusk. This is changing time for the nature energies; the time when subtle forces are most easily seen and accessed. This is why, in all nature disciplines, twilight and dawn are known as the time when the nature spirits are closest to our world.

The Grocery List

Louise Redden, a poorly dressed lady with a look of defeat on her face, walked into a grocery store. She approached the owner of the store in a most humble manner and asked if he would let her charge a few groceries.

She softly explained that her husband was very ill and unable to work, they had seven children and they needed food. John Longhouse, the grocer scoffed at her and requested that she leave his store at once. Visualizing the family needs, she said: "Please, sir! I will bring you the money just as soon as I can."

John told her he could not give her credit, since she did not have a charge account at his store. Standing beside the counter was a customer who overheard the conversation between the two. The customer walked forward and told the grocer that he would stand good for whatever she needed for her family.

The grocer said in a very reluctant voice, "Do you have a grocery list?" Louise replied, "Yes sir", "OK" he said, "put your grocery list on the scales and whatever your grocery list weighs, I will give you that amount in groceries."

Louise, hesitated a moment with a bowed head, then she reached into her purse and took out a piece of paper and scribbled something on it. She then laid the piece of paper on the scale carefully with her head still bowed.

The eyes of the grocer and the customer showed amazement when the scales went down, and stayed down. The grocer, staring at the scales, turned slowly to the customer and said begrudgingly, "I can't believe it."

The customer smiled and the grocer started putting the groceries on the other side of the scales. The scale did not balance so he continued to put more and more groceries on them until the scales would hold no more. The grocer stood there in utter disgust. Finally, he grabbed the piece of paper from the scales and looked at it with greater amazement. It was not a grocery list; it was a prayer, which said: “Dear Lord, you know my needs and I am leaving this in your hands.”

The grocer gave her the groceries that he had gathered and stood in stunned silence. Louise thanked him and left the store.

The other customer handed a fifty-dollar bill to the grocer and said, “It was worth every penny of it. Only God knows how much a prayer weighs.”

Lost Objects and Thought Forms

by Pamela Mayer

As a long-time member of the American Society of Dowsers, I love to have stories to pass on to unbelievers. Here is my current favorite - which happens to be about ASD president, Harold McCoy.

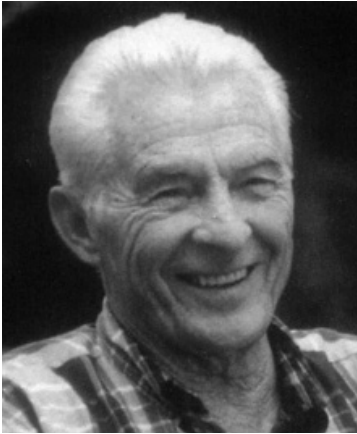

Last December my 11-year-old grand daughter, Meg, was playing a very valuable harp at a Christmas musical event in Oakland, California. Despite what was thought to be excellent security, the harp was stolen. Police were called in and various investigations pursued - all to no avail. Then it occurred to us to call ASD Headquarters at Danville for help. Whoever picked up the phone (I am eternally grateful to her) told me that Harold McCoy was good at this sort of thing - so I called Harold, in Arkansas, and put him in touch with Meg's mother, my daughter, in California.

Harold asked for a map of Oakland and a photograph of the harp: from these he was able to say that the harp was safe; that it was still in Oakland; that it was somewhere near the intersection of two particular streets, possibly connected in some way to a particular house. My daughter drove to the place and identified the house - which subsequently turned out to belong to a respectable old lady who had lived there for many years. The search seemed to be at a dead end - yet Harold continued to get the message that the harp was safe, and still connected to that area in some way.

My daughter pursued various other avenues: more police work, the local news media, musical instrument dealers and pawn shops, but could find no word of the harp. After two months she decided to place flyers within two-block radius of the intersection, describing the harp and mentioning reward, with no questions asked.

The Oakland police, at this point, were saying that the least likely place to find the harp would be anywhere in Oakland - since unique, saleable, place - and they were recommending that out-of-state police be contacted rather than pursuing the search in Oakland.

Harold McCoy

By this time, Harold was picking up that although the harp was still safe, the person holding it was very frightened, and he began sending reassuring thought forms toward the person. A week later, a phone call came saying that the caller had a friend who had bought the harp without knowing it was stolen, and that his friend would probably be willing to return it in exchange for what he had paid for it. When my daughter asked him where he had seen the flyer, the caller readily described the area that Harold had first identified - which, in fact, was the only area where the flyers had been posted.

There were two more calls, then finally an exchange was agreed upon and arranged. A young 'relative' of the caller's 'friend' would be outside a particular Safeway in a particular place. And sure enough, when my daughter and her husband arrived at the Safeway, a boy was waiting there carrying the harp. It was handed over - and the youngster turned and ran, not even looking inside the envelope he had received in exchange. When my daughter called Harold to tell him of the harps return, he was not surprised - he had been expecting and predicting all along that it would be found. But he was very relieved to hear that it was in superb condition; his concern had been that the person holding it had become so frightened that the harp might be destroyed.

So for Harold, the primary focus had been sending thought forms to counteract this. Meg's teacher, a professional concert-harpist, was surprised that the instrument had survived at all - after four months with no case, no temperature control, and probably careless handling as it was moved about. In fact, to everyone's amazement, it was not even badly out of tune!

Successful Trial in Reversing Diabetes

Guy Kramhoft has been dowsing health charts for the last twenty years and is constantly researching natural therapies to combat modern illnesses.

His recent day long seminar on 'Pathway to Health' was a sell-out and was extremely well received. During that day, amongst other things, Guy commented that Diabetes can be treated successfully.

This talk deals with Diabetes which modern medicine often treats with insulin by injection. However, there is another approach which does not involve drugs. Guy will discuss this new trial therapy in detail, as well as his approach to health.

He will show a DVD and then follow up with an open discussion of the treatment as shown in the film.

This is a fascinating subject and you will be surprised at this new way of treating the disease.
